

Child-to-Child and Disaster Risk Reduction

What Children Can Do to Keep Themselves and Others Safe

18th February to 1st March 2013, Lilongwe, Malawi

Child-to-Child Trust

CRIDOC

Although children's abilities to identify, avoid and manage risks are rarely, if ever, recognised, let alone taken into account or developed, children can contribute a great deal to risk management, keeping themselves and other members of their families and communities safe.

In this course, the overall aim is to strengthen participants' ability to promote children's participation in risk management, both in everyday life and relating to disasters for themselves and others.

The course objectives are;

- To introduce the Child-to-Child approach.
- To encourage participants to use more active methods in their work with children, and to give the participants the opportunity to experience and experiment with such methods;
- To increase participants' awareness of children's abilities, needs and interests;
- To enable participants to promote children's participation in community measures to reduce disaster risks, and thus keep themselves, other children and other community members safe.

Tuition Fees* for participants from;

- International organisations: US$2,000
- Government institutions: US$1,600
- Local NGOs: US$1,400

*The cost includes meals (lunch and snacks, but excluding dinner) and resource materials. Accommodation will be organised separately on request.

Participants who successfully complete the course will be awarded certificates by the Child-to-Child Trust, University of London.
